BOOK EXCERPT From the Overall Summary: Animals have the power to conspire, plan and form a revolution against the master species of human beings in George Orwell's Animal Farm. Orwell takes you through the process of the animals creating a set of rules and commandments for all animals to abide by. They appropriately title their new system Animalism. The animals stress that they are all created equal. The smartest, most engaging speakers begin to lead the meetings. These are the pigs. Many of the other animals are not smart enough to follow the reasoning behind decisions being made. Nobody has the knowledge or power to stand up to the pigs. Laws are adapted to increase their power with no consideration for the other classes of animals. The dogs watch over the pigs.

They make sure that if other animals are smart enough to recognize the injustices, they are not willing to stand up to the pigs. The sheep are the mindless followers.

They will believe anything they are told. As the narrative progresses, Orwell illustrates the various classes that exist on the farm as well as their ongoing roles. Pigs, dogs, sheep and horses all have their respective place on the farm. The result of Orwell's Animal Farm is a satire of human civilization, sociology and government.
